

Hans Kamp, U Stuttgart

When I was looking at the picture show before the start of the afternoon session (of the day dedicated to Feri Kiefer's birthday and memory), I heard, as soon as I saw the first of the many, many pictures that showed him laughing, that unique infectious laugh. And with that laugh my mind was flooded with the warmth and wit that Feri would radiate from the instant you shook hands with him or the moment he would come into the room. And that made me see as clearly as I ever have:

Feri will be with us not only through his scientific contributions but also through that laugh, that will ring in our heads whenever we think of him, and through all that that laugh stood and will continue to stand for.
